

The Department of History of Art at the University of Michigan is pleased to announce

The Forsyth Visiting Graduate Student Fellowship

This fellowship provides 3-4 Masters and PhD students, especially foreign and located at any university in the world, financial support to join the Department of History of Art at the University of Michigan for an academic year of study, writing, and interaction. Our inaugural cohort members will each receive a $20,000 stipend for the academic year as well as roundtrip travel expenses.

For further information about the fellowship program and application procedures, please consult our website at <https://myumi.ch/P11Dn>

Applications are due March 1, 2022, and offers will be extended to selected fellows by April 15, 2022.

“I consider this fellowship endeavor as trendsetting at the global level. It will enrich our graduate student cohorts while making our faculty expertise and university resources available to those beyond our campus grounds. We seek in particular to recruit students who might benefit from financial assistance and scholarly mentoring, among them promising Masters students from diverse communities, both domestic and international, who also may explore applying to our PhD program.”
